City Council honors student artists

Four students – one from each of the city’s public high schools – designed this year’s official City Council holiday cards.

“These cards are just beautiful and truly capture the beauty of Hampton. Every year I am more impressed with the quality of artwork by our Hampton students,” said Mayor Molly Ward.

The four student artists were honored by the mayor and City Council at their Dec. 12 meeting:

- Jessica Nemnich, Bethel High junior
- Falyne Couron, Hampton High junior
- Hannah Merchant, Phoebus High senior
- Tre’Shell Burton, Kecoughtan senior

Each of the students received a packet of the cards she designed. Posters of the winning art are on display in the City Hall lobby until the end of the year, then will be given to the students.

Each student received blank cards in her design, as well as a gift. The cards were printed by the schools’ print shop. All four designs are used each year.
